The Wire Monitor (WireMonitor) is a free application for monitoring and controlling Digital Subscriber Line (DSL) transmissions over twisted pair telephone lines. It enables you to watch the traffic of the ADSL connection with little or no effort, such as bandwidth use, retries and losses. The (German) Internet Explorer (IE) allows you to watch your packets as they are transmitted over the Internet. The (German) Internet Explorer (IE) can be configured for traffic caching and is best suited for ISPs, content providers, system administrators and others who use the Internet constantly and permanently. The Internet Explorer can also be used to communicate with other computers on the Internet via HTTP or HTTPS, or to communicate with other so-called SOCKS servers (e.g. TOR proxies, etc.) Use "Generell" or "Hauptfenster" for regular browsing, or use "Fenster" when you want to download files and other activities from websites. Video Blocker (VB) is an efficient tool for keeping your mobile/tablet devices safe from TV show/movie ads. With Video Blocker you can filter the out-of-home content of videos and movies in order to protect your children and your sensitive data. Video Blocker is a simple user interface for watching ads in the free applications of the Android operating system, as well as in the free applications of the iOS operating system. Video Blocker currently supports only the streaming video services with ads, such as Netflix, Spotify, etc. With Yate, you can easily recognize your contact data, managing it effectively, and you can sync it across your different devices. Contact data are the data about people you communicate regularly, such as your email addresses, phone numbers, or the people you meet at work, school, or the gym. By syncing the data you can carry them between your devices. The list of contacts is based on your Internet activity and you can also define, filter, and prioritize the contact data in an intuitive way. The contacts are kept in a dedicated database. Therefore you can fill them in directly using the web interface, synchronize them to your other devices using Yate Account Web Site (Online Account), or import your contact data using Yate Import/Export from Google Contacts. Play with your friends on the web using Facebook. Log in using Facebook Login or select your existing Facebook account. You may also join and invite your

To clarify the results of heart-beating donor renal transplants in Japan, we performed retrospective analysis of the results of 124 renal transplants performed between January 1980 and December 1984. The age, sex, body weight, weight of donated kidney, blood loss, results of laboratory examinations, donor and recipient data, number of surgical procedures, and postoperative management are described for each recipient. We also performed univariate and multivariate analyses of these data to determine the effects of donor parameters on the graft survival rate. Donor age and recipient age had no effect on graft survival in the univariate analysis. The duration between donor death and transplant, however, was a significant influencing factor. The graft survival rate in hearts that had been removed 4 hours or more after death was lower than that in hearts that were removed 0 to 3 hours after death (p less than 0.01). The graft survival rate in recipients receiving kidneys from donors with a creatinine level of less than 1.5 mg/dl was higher than that in recipients receiving kidneys from donors with a creatinine level of greater than or equal to 1.5 mg/dl (p less than 0.05). This difference in graft survival rate was most apparent during the first month after transplantation. The difference in graft survival rate was a significant factor in the multivariate analysis. The graft survival rate in the first 6 months of recipients with negative donor cytomegalovirus antibody was higher than that in recipients with positive donor cytomegalovirus antibody (p less than 0.01).(ABSTRACT TRUNCATED AT 250 WORDS)Q: Display a QSignalMapper's mapped signal value in a QComboBox I use a QSignalMapper to map the index of a QComboBox to a signal value.
